“

As always, the NES was a great day. Myself and the staff found the workshops informative and engaging. There was a good range of workshops available again this year for staff to choose from and also a good range of stalls. We've already started implementing some of the ideas and practice picked up during the show which is having a positive impact on our children.

Lynsey Wangiel, Headteacher

“

We thoroughly enjoyed the National Educations Show in Cardiff this October. It was interesting, informative and the speakers were inspirational. As educators, we had the chance to network, chat, explore and think about the possibilities for our children in our setting. It was a special day and a valuable chance for quality professional development for staff.

Mrs. M.C.Werrett, Headteacher

“

The teacher conference 2023 was thoroughly enjoyable with an excellent range of guest speakers to choose and engage with. The National Education Show was well organised and the range of stalls from both professional and industry groups provided something for everyone. We will be returning next year, hopefully, as a full school cohort to enhance our professional development.

C Hewitt, Headteacher

Agored Cymru's qualifications for Schools: The Learning Core

Here are some of the benefits of offering our qualifications and how they fit with the new curriculum...

PSE is FAB!

The Personal and Social Education qualification won the Federation of Awarding Bodies (FAB) – Qualification of the year award 2022.

The qualification is offered in 66% of secondary schools in Wales both through the medium of English and Welsh with consistent year on year growth of centre numbers, and most importantly learners.

Why offer Agored Cymru qualifications?

The Learning Core Qualifications:
 Work Related Education Learning in the Outdoors
 Wales, Europe and the World Exploring Worldviews
 Personal and Social Education

Our Learning Core qualifications are built around the Curriculum for Wales' reforms and we will continue to evolve with these emerging developments. Agored Cymru is committed to creating 21st Century Qualifications for a 21st Century Curriculum in Wales.

The qualifications

- measure a learner's application of knowledge and skills through assessments
- support an inclusive approach to learning through offering an alternative to exams
- offer GCSE equivalencies
- count towards school performance points

Improve children's skills through Taskmaster. Your time starts now!

Taskmaster Education was set up with the aim of taking elements of the Channel 4 television show, Taskmaster, and using them to inspire, engage and teach children and young people. Through a variety of means, including clubs, resources, shows, and written content, Taskmaster Education is honing skills, such as problem-solving, lateral thinking, teamwork, creativity, and resilience, through educational and engaging task-based learning. The beauty of Taskmaster is that its format can be adapted to meet a near infinite range of teacher objectives, whether curriculum-based or more focused on social and emotional development. In this seminar, we will highlight how this can be done in a way that maximizes the inculcation of skills. The seminar will be fun, interactive and educational, showing teachers how Taskmaster can be an engaging and inclusive vehicle for education at all ages.

AI and wellbeing in education: Friend or Foe?

The integration of Artificial Intelligence (AI) in education has brought about numerous advancements and transformations in the learning process. While AI offers exciting possibilities to enhance educational outcomes, it also raises important questions about its impact on both student and staff wellbeing. In this session we will delve into the complex relationship between AI and wellbeing, exploring the potential benefits and challenges associated with its implementation in educational settings.

Autism: Behaviour pattern or neurotype?

Our understanding of autism forms the foundations upon which we build: our teaching strategies, our approaches to behaviour and our wellbeing support. Our foundational understanding of autism is ultimately the biggest factor in the success or otherwise of the support we offer to autistic students. This seminar explores the difference between understanding autism as a pattern of behaviours and understanding autism as a neurotype. Using real life examples we will explore the 'house upon the rocks/house upon the sand' distinction between these two understandings of autism, for the outcomes and wellbeing of your students and those around them, including you!

Effective classroom strategies for neurodiverse children and young people

This seminar will explore the principal overarching classroom strategies to support neurodiverse pupils. The session will include the following content areas:

1. How to structure and deliver personalised approaches.
2. Neurodiverse friendly classroom cultures and supporting communication and interaction.
3. How to encourage a strength based approach for neurodiverse learners.
4. A particular focus upon Working memory and executive functioning.
5. The centrality of engagement and how to plan for this.

Reducing restrictive practices in schools - Prevention, de-escalation, and consistent responses

A school culture that supports the management of the most distressed students brilliantly is the key to calm, predictable learning environments. Ollie will help you untangle the chaos of punishment and blame while sharing practical and irresistible practice from the best practitioners that serve to de-escalate situations and reduce the need for physical intervention. Ollie will explain how some young people follow the rules and some follow people first. He will leave you with practical strategies to help busy adults deal with the angriest learners and present a rationale for why prevention has to be the cure.

Health and wellbeing outdoors - effective ways of engaging pupils

This practical hands-on workshop will awaken the senses and provide opportunities to connect with nature. Being outdoors provides real world experiences to promote thinking and problem-solving skills. This session will encourage participants to discover ways to improve motor skills and increase levels of physical activity as well as explore creativity and inspiration through easy activities and games. All of which encourage engagement in learning and increased academic achievement. Participants will be able to enhance their skills as a facilitator and understand the role of adults in the outdoor environment. The outdoors is a place to nurture ourselves and those around us. It helps to reduce stress and fatigue which in turn improves our health and wellbeing. The session will be outside in Bute Park, exploring the green heart of the city. Please bring outdoor clothing and sturdy shoes/wellies to wear.

Sensory communication for crisis situations

When triggered at a sensory level people enter 'fight or flight' mode (+ freeze, flop or fawn). In this mode access to vital brain processes that enable communication is lost, meaning that the strategies we ordinarily use to may no longer work. In this seminar you'll discover sensory flight paths and consider sensory communication techniques that can be used to support any distressed person to feel safe and calm. The seminar will hold particular relevance to those supporting students with sensory differences who may experience distress more frequently than others and express this through their behaviour.

The 3Es of Inclusion: Making the classroom work for working-class students

Working-class students start out at a disadvantage and the education system fails to close the gap. Working-class students get worse outcomes, are less likely to go to university, are less likely to find fulfilling and well-paid employment, and experience worse health and wellbeing. This not about ability or effort; it is an accident of birth. Meritocracy doesn't exist. In this interactive seminar, Matt Bromley, author of The Working Classroom, will set out 3 problems with schooling that disadvantage the already disadvantaged, and offer 3 solutions - the 3Es.

Cracking number fact recall!

This seminar is for those teachers and schools that feel they haven't yet 'cracked the system' to make sure their children always have instant recall of number facts.

The seminar will look at securing recall of addition facts. This is the foundation of any school's primary maths provision, yet an area where schools tend to have least success. We will then explore how schools can implement a water-tight system for multiplication fact recall. A key feature of the seminar will be exploring how we actually teach recall of number facts, rather than simply giving children a space to practice.

Closing the disadvantage gap: We need to talk about Jason

This session will focus on children and young people who grow up in poverty. Jean will explore myths and wrong turnings in our efforts to close the gap in attainment between these disadvantaged learners and their peers. She will suggest effective approaches, from a focus on oracy through to attending to children's sense of agency. You will learn about the power of building confidence, belonging and connectedness, take your own self-efficacy test and discover a host of simple but effective gap-closing classroom techniques.

What the best schools do differently, and what they do the same?

Why do some schools do so much better than others? Is it because they have an easier demographic? More money? Better schemes of work? Often, it's none of these things. And typically it's nothing obviously different to what you're doing. So, what is different? In this seminar we'll clarify what is a 'great school' and share what is and isn't different about them so you can apply this to your school for the benefit of your pupils.

Guiding pupils through the Learning Pit

The Learning Pit is one of the most widely used models for teaching to emerge in the last 20 years. It was created by James Nottingham, one of our conference speakers. The purpose of the Learning Pit is to encourage pupils to more willingly step out of their comfort zone. When they do so - when they go beyond their current knowledge, understanding and abilities - they are likely to make progress. Unfortunately, however, many pupils resist taking this step for fear of looking foolish in front of their peers. It is therefore important to create the ethos in which challenge is not just permitted but preferred. The Learning Pit can make a positive contribution towards this.

Brilliant behaviour & learning

Behaviour and Learning are the same thing; in truth - you can't have one without the other. Sometimes, it feels like we don't have either. Classroom practice is a struggle for everyone. Teachers have 102 things to do. Most of which involve leaving no educational stones unturned. We do more and more in the pursuit of progress for pupils with an increasingly diverse set of needs. Something has to give... and it's usually you! 'Brilliant Behaviour and Learning' shares cutting-edge behavioural and learning principles and practice. It's about teachers doing less rather than more, cultivating the classroom conditions required for all children to flourish.

How the heck can the rekenrek help build early number sense?

Have you heard about this versatile, visual, concrete manipulative? Perhaps you are curious... or even sceptical? If you are interested in encouraging mathematical talk, reasoning, deeper understanding and daily practice in a hands-on visual method, then this session is for you. You truly have to see it to believe it. This is your chance to try a 20 bead rekenrek and leave with many ideas to use the very next day. You will be amazed at how this tool can be the mess-free answer for children developing a deeper understanding of number sense while naturally engaging in rich mathematical talk.

How to boost your own emotional health and wellbeing so you have more energy for yourself and others

"Yesterday I was clever, so I wanted to change the world. Today I am wise, so I am changing myself." – Rumi. It is easy to ignore our own wellbeing needs, but adults need to role model good wellbeing and to keep it high on school agendas. We need balance in our lives and to work on Personal Care Plans, mindfulness and fun to recharge energy and joy levels, to have energy to actively support others. It's important we reach out and share our experiences in supportive, non-judgemental adult forums to create strong, caring, inclusive relationships and learning environments for everyone.

An introduction to Adverse Childhood Experiences (ACEs) and Trauma

Research is increasingly showing that the way a child is treated in the early years of their life can be really important and can influence the way they relate to other people. A child's distressed behaviour is often masked or misunderstood in our schools, causing escalating stress on all levels. These issues can often mean a child is excluded or moved to inappropriate settings and this can lead to family breakdowns, mental health difficulties and life-long problems. This course will support schools in identifying and supporting those children who may have had adverse childhood experiences leading to trauma and attachment issues.

Navigating towards positive change in your school environment

When lost we use a compass and map to help navigate. Use Compass for Life (CfL) to create navigational tools to move your school, classroom, parental engagement, any aspect of school life, in a positive direction. CfL will help you to not only ensure you have a clear vision but that you can communicate effectively with all stakeholders. This helps to put the child at the centre of everything we do ensuring we are preparing them as 21 st Century learners. This will be clear to internal and external parties - seeing the impact that having a common framework and language has.

Why we need a needs led approach to ALN/SEND

Too often responses to children who are struggling with learning is to ask, 'What is wrong with them?' This deficit model leads to a focus on diagnoses and often misses children's strengths and motivators. In this seminar, Sara Alston will argue that often the diagnoses given to children are too wide to be truly helpful when identifying their education needs. Instead to provide children with the support they need, we need instead to focus on their needs. She will suggest practical ways of doing this.

Three keys to become an SEMH Jedi (with even the most complex students)

Because its as easy as that isn't it!!!! 1,2,3 and you will leave this session with a light sabre. After 15 years of Educational and Child Psychology practice I have condensed some of the most phenomenal practice into these three keys that will help ANY practitioner turn ANY student into a SUPER FAN. Hard to believe I know, but these approaches are tried and tested and have immediate impact. I want to give you powerful PRACTICAL psychological tools that will turn those 'PDA' students into pussy cats (ones that don't scratch). I will show you a highly effective way to win over students with attachment difficulties AND how to stand in front of those challenges student (and classes) with confidence and conviction. We will look at ways to understand the function on student behaviours IN MINUTES, no really, minutes and how to redirect it FAST.
